

ABSTRACT

An information transacting mechanism between a provider and a customer is provided. The information transacting mechanism comprises an information server controlled by the provider. An original information box is extracted from the information server. A tool server provides tools when instructed by the provider. A tool-added information box is resulted from the original information box by packing tools therein via the tool server and sent to the customer for the customer to access the data contained in the tool-added information box.